From Tom Stachler's vantage point, THE HORIZON SEEMS INFINITE.

And that's just the way he likes it.

Thomas Stachler is a man who thrives on adventure.

One of his favorite adventures is sailing solo on Lake Huron and looking out at the horizon stretching beyond where the eye can see surrounded by new inlets and islands to discover and explore. "Standing at the helm and looking out at the water inspires me to push forward and find what's out there," Tom says. Whether carving up the mountain "twisties" on his BMW motorcycle, pulling some acceleration Gs in his high-performance automobile or challenging an opponent on the tennis court, Tom pushes himself to excel and go beyond in everything he does.

Going Beyond

Tom's son is active in competitive tennis and gives him all the challenge he wants on the court.

tended to prior to the spotlight hitting the stage.

The cutthroat nature and lack of loyalty in the music business eventually wore Tom down, and he sold the company in search of a new career "adventure." On the cusp of the Internet revolution, Tom created a marketing company that designed websites and developed software. However, Tom is a people person and longed to return to an industry in which he could work directly with his customers.

To those who know Tom best, none of this comes as any surprise. He's the type of guy whose intense inner drive motivates him to "go beyond" in any pursuit. He doesn't do things halfway; if Tom is committed to a project, he's all-in. This approach has also fueled his many professional successes throughout his lifetime. After college and a brief stint in the auto business, Tom founded his own concert promotion company, Prism Productions in 1979. In the midst of the New Wave era, Tom put on countless shows in venues from intimate nightclubs to 25,000-seat arenas working with artists such as David Bowie, REM, Duran Duran, Billy Idol, Ramones, Phil Collins, Chuck Berry and Jerry Lee Lewis to name a few. He thrived on ensuring every last detail was

Beyond Expectations

Putting his Internet marketing expertise to good use, Tom embarked on a real estate career in the early '90s, and he hasn't looked back since. Even before he got into the business, he always loved looking at properties, even on vacations. Combining his natural passion for real estate, his desire to help others and his willingness to "go beyond" for his clients, Tom quickly established himself as a leading real estate resource serving Washtenaw, Wayne & Livingston Counties. Tom has a builder's license and the experience to spot serious property issues or envision a renovation and advise his clients on cost estimates and contractor recommendations.

At home, Tom's loyal companion is his cherished Brussels Griffon named Raef.

Experience is What You Need to Get the Results You Deserve

Tom's dedication to your real estate goals is evident from the first moment you meet him.

For more than two decades, Tom has built an unparalleled track record and a core of loyal clients who would never consider using anyone else when buying or selling investment or residential property. Tom's "Go Beyond" approach means that he's by your side throughout every step of the process, before and most importantly, after your closing. As the weeks or years go by, just ask Tom any time that you have a question or a need, which is part of his desired "client for life" philosophy. He is always there for you. His decades of experience earned him a state Brokers License and it's this past experience that provides him with a market insight well beyond that of a typical "agent" class licensee. This experience is exactly what you need to get the results you deserve.

Going Beyond for You

When you combine Tom's experience, lifetime of local knowledge, 24/7 accessibility, thorough industry knowledge, online marketing expertise and attention to detail, it all becomes as clear as that horizon line on Lake Huron – Tom Stachler is the best choice for all of your real estate needs. If you're considering buying or selling residential or commercial real estate, contact Tom today.
